

Marc Galanter, M.D.

Marc Galanter, M.D. is a Professor of Psychiatry at NYU. He founded the Division of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse at NYU, and the journal "Substance Abuse." He is co-editor of the APA's "Textbook of Substance Abuse Treatment," and has written four books, "Cults: Faith, Healing, and Coercion," "Network Therapy for Alcohol and Drug Abuse," "Spirituality and the Healthy Mind," and "What is Alcoholics Anonymous? A Path from Addiction to Recovery," and published over 200 peer-reviewed articles. His NIH and foundation-funded studies have addressed Network Therapy for substance abuse, pharmacologic treatment for addiction, the psychology of Twelve-Step recovery, and spirituality in healthcare.

Dr. Galanter attended Albert Einstein College of Medicine where he did his residency in psychiatry. After that he was a Clinical Associate at the National Institute of Mental Health, then an NIH Career Teacher. He later served as President of the Association for Medical Education and Research in Substance Abuse (AMERSA), the American Academy of Addiction Psychiatry (AAAP), and the American Society of Addiction Medicine (ASAM). Among his awards are the Gold Achievement Award for innovation in clinical care, and the Seymour Vestermark Award for Psychiatric Education, both from the American Psychiatric Association; the McGovern Award for Medical Teaching from AMERSA; the Founder's Award from AAAP; New York State's Award for Psychiatric Research; and the Smithers Distinguished Scientist Award from ASAM.
